

Indeed - Marketing | Sensory Scientist: Know the Company, Inside and Out

[MUSIC PLAYING]

A company visit is when one or sometimes several of us will go in on a planned visit, get to see the facility, get to see the labs, and just be able to describe to our candidates, as much as possible be on the job description what they're about and really understand not only what they do from a technical perspective but get a sense of their culture. Are people smiling when they're walking through the hallways? You get to sit down and go have lunch or dinner with hiring managers and understand why they went there and what their pains are without this position being filled. So you can start kind of storyboarding what the entire thing looks like, not just this is the job.
